I got the experience, to attend Saddle rock- Malibu viticulture area. I attend the Art Institute of LA: CA, for Culinary Management. Saddle rock was the place we choose to wine taste. The Merlot, Syrah, and Cabernet Savignon were of exquisite character and quality. The information was precise and the knowledge I acquired was filled. The vintners knew what they were talking about, they had historical information, and they had evidence relating to geographical features.

They were following the rules and the guidelines of the AC Laws. We had many questions and they answered well, their reputations have high standards. Another interesting fact I learned was the pruning and the watering of the vines once in a while. Everything really matters, when it comes to bottling wine, everything from the area, to the weather and the soil.

Any little thing can change the characteristic of the wine; overall I learned a lot from this trip. I would like to attend Saddle rock- Malibu again in the spring or summer. The vineyard and the landscape were awesome; they get two thumbs up, for there vineyard.

Sincerely, Julissa Rotter
