Petition to establish a viticultural area in Maryland to be known as:

Linganore Valley

The Linganore varea is in the southeast corner of Frederick county in the state of Maryland.

The Linganore name is applied to an area of about 77 square miles drained by a network of steams feeding into the major waterway known as the Linganore Creek and encommpassing parts of Frederick and Carroll counties. This area also contains Linganore High School, and Lake Linganore, a modern community built about an artificial lake formed by the Linganore Creek, and some of its tributairies. (see pages from phone book) The Linganore Basin is also recognised by the Frederick County Engineers as a unique drainage area. The name Linganore is also applied to a major soil type found in the area known as Linganore Manor.

The name Linganore has been freely used in Williams History of Frederick County" and has origins before 1780. The name Linganore is indian in origin, although its exact meaning has been lost. Folk lore indicates the name is that of an indian chief, meaning left ear. Other derivations indicate that it is a word derived from Delaware and Alagonquin languages, meaning melting coupiously in the spring. We believe the latter is more logical, since the many small streams and tributaries of the Linganore carry much water from the sharply sloping land, to flood lowlands easily in the spring thaw. The name is also found in old court settlements and in land aquisitions of the area.

- I am enclosing the following U.S.G.S. maps which contain the Linganore Creek and its tributaries. The boundaries can be found on the following which are all 7.5 minute series:

 - 2. Libertytown Quadrangle, Maryland.

- 5. Winfield Quadrangle, Maryland.

This area is enclosed by a ridge line to the East, North, and West. The ridge line is not as distinct to the south and west, where there is a break in the western ridge, allowing the waters of the Linganore to escape, and drain into the Monocacy River, a tributary of the Potomac River. In some cases an important county or state road follows the ridge line, but these roads should not be misconstrued as the area boundary.

C. The U.S.G.S. maps indicate that the Linganore area is the first western piedmont area, coming up from the coastal plain, which rises to a height of about 800 feet at the eastern edge of the Linganore area. The coastal plain area has higher temperatures, and humidities than the peidmont, as evidenced on the growing degree day map inclosed.

The soil of the Linganore area is uniquely all of the same character, being Manor soils, with the exception of the small area of lowland at the mouth of the Linganore where it empties into the Monocacy River. A major portion of the land in the area is that known as Linganore Manor. Manor is a 2 to 8 foot deep gravelly loam containing much silt, and small specs of mica. It is excessively drained, and tends to be drouthy in years of low rainfall. This topsoil is underlain with shale bedrock, which tens to have a high water table. The soil types found in the area are found nowhere else in the county, except for small outcroppings that streeh across ridge lines.

The natural Ph of the soils in the area is ideal for the growing of grapes, being between 5.1 and 6.5.

The Linganore area, as evidenced from the maps, contains hills from 800 feet elevation to valleys of less than 400 feet. Thus the growing of grapes is quite site specific, depending on elevation and slope to avoid spring frosts, and wet feet due to shallow topsoil and a high water table.

In as Chelenh

C. con't.

The lower land at the western end of the region combined with the slopes of the area open the region to the prevailing westerly winds which constantly wash the vineyards with clean air, thus assisting in the control of diseases.

There is only one 38 acre vineyard in the area, and numerous small vineyards, all under 1 acre used by the owners for private purposes. Fruit growing is not the forte of the area, but many of the areas dairy farms do have their own fruit trees, grown succesively for the owners private benefit,

Fruits of the area are Apples, peaches, sweet and sour cherries, plumbs, elderberries, and brambles.

D. The specific boundaries of the viticultural area, known as THE Linganore, ware as follows:

East Boundary: The east boundary of the Linganore region is the Parrs Ridge, with elevation from 760 to 880 feet containing Manor soil to the west, within the Linganore, and other soil types to the east on the coastal plain side of Parrs Ridge.

Morth Foundary: The north line of the region is not quite as distinctive, but may be followed on the U.S.G.S. maps as indicated with elevations between 580 and 860 feet, with land outside the area being flatter and of different soil type.

South Boundary: The south ridge line varies from 240 feet where the gap in the western ridge allows the Linganore waters to escape into the Monocacy, to 840 feet at the eastern edge of the south ridge. Again land to the south of the south boundary, is smoother and flatter, and of a still different soil type.

West Boundary: The western boundary varies from 240 feet, where the Linganore escapes from the valley into the Monocacy, to a high point of 725. Outside the western boundary, the land slopes gently to meet the banks of the Monocacy River, and does not have the sharply rolling character of the terrain contained inside the Linganore area. Outside the western boundary the soils change to sandstone and limestone mix and you have left the constant Manor soils which make the region so unique.

Pacaty, Pocketty) come from the same Anguing Dorehester County, q. v. I suppose that the modern Brockatonorton has been fashioned by the folk into a semblance of the surnames Brock and Norton. Mrs. Helen Torrence, 12 however, mindful of the form Bogertenorton. and the possibility⁷⁸ that Giovanni de Verrazano may have visited Maryland in 1521, thought that the present name may be a folk disguise for Boca de Norte, 'Mouth of (the) North.' This is very unlikely for three reasons: (1) Nowhere in his account 14 does Verrazano speak of bestowing a name; (2) The Italian for 'Mouth of the North' would be Bocca del Nord; (3) This Worcester County area has so many undisputed Indian names that an exception other than English would be improbable.76

*CONEY ISLAND AND *JOHOLLOW

*Concy Island, a 1755-5776 spelling variant of *Canoy Island, and *Johollow from *Conejohela," denote Heater's Island in the Potomac River, Frederick County, and a place in what was historically northeastern Maryland, respectively. The 1737 and 1751 spellings78 of the island's name were Canoy, from the Piscataway Indians, who were known as 'Conoois or Pascattaways." It seems likely that the spelling Coney is the result of folk analogy to coney (cony), a synonym for 'rabbit,' 'hare.' That this word was so used by the colonists is shown by Coney Island, N. Y., Coney Island, Bermuda, and the estate, 'Coney Warren,' mentioned on a Maryland land survey of 1696.80 *Johollow-evidently a folk analogy to "Joe Hollow"-

Read. William Marye speaks of Concjohola as a corrupt form, and Douchoo, at identifying the place as Thomas Cresap's Suscuchanna home in 1720, spells it Conejohela. Today it appears as Canajoharie, New York ctrek and town.86

*Hunger River and Linganore Creek

Each of these names was subjected, first, to the speech habit of closing a final open syllable with r, and, second, to folk etymology. The earlier forms were Honga⁸⁶ and Linganoa,⁸⁷ but, as with *Sinegar (Seneca),  *Shanandore (Sunandoah), so and Connewangur for Conowingo, an intrusive r became attached and later led to etiological meanings. Though in six spellings, from 1600 to 1678,00 the Honga River is found as *Hunger (Hungor), its real centity is probably Indian and it apparently has nothing whatever to do with English hunger. And though Linganore, if it were an authentic form, could be from the German Linke ohr ('left ear'), any derivation based on Linganore must be wrong, because not it but Linganoa is the original word. The name, however, can almost boast an etiological story when T. J. C. Williams 1 declares: "...[it] gets its name, which means 'Left ear,' from an Indian chief who lived upon its banks."

PORT TOBACCO

This name of a Southern Maryland river, creek, post office and railroad eartion is the folk rendition and survival of an Indian word which, though of somewhat uncertain origin,92 has nothing whatever to do with either port' or 'tobacco.' It has been variously spelled Potapaco (1608), Patobanos

Under any circumstances, it would appear that he missed and makes no mention of Chesapeake and Delaware Bays.

The Origin and Meaning of the Indian Place Names of Maryland

By HAMILL KENNY, Ph.D.

of Kittamaquindi. I conclude that the totem of the Piscataway gens was the beaver, and that the 'old great beaver' was the emperor himself.'

KLONDIKE ['klan,dark]

A coal mining village in the George's Creek locality of Allegany County (Gazetteer Md. 1941).

The name was given early in the present century by the Klondike Mining Company. It is Athapascan and quite foreign to Maryland. Cf. Alaska, W. Va.

*KUS: flu: (*KUSKARAWAOK [village], *KUSKARAWAOKS [region])
Former designations of the Nanticoke River and its watershed (Virginia 1608 Smith).

Previous Opinions

About the Kuskarawaoks (Cuscarawaoks) found here in 1608, Smith had commented: "... where is made so much Rawranoke or white beads, ..." Tooker, referring to Smith's comment, concludes (Algonquian Series, IX, 1901): "With this evidence ..., the name resolves itself into the constituent parts cusca - rawran - oke." This means (Tooker) 'A place of making white beads.'

Commentary

Tooker apparently relates his first element, cusca-, to Delaware gisch (kisch). But this stem is from PA * $k\bar{i}ci$ 'completed action,' and an original PA long \bar{i} could not become a short \check{u} . The second element, rawran, contains an n which does not appear in Kuskarawaok. The final element, -oke 'place' or 'country,' is not supported by correct analysis.

Conclusion

I think it is more accurate to analyze *Kuskarawaok as *kacki-lāl-ahwāwki 'They are expert at smoothing them' (i.e., sea shells for wampum). The component stems are (i) PA 'kācki-'(io) be abie, expert, successful'; (2) PA *-lāl- '(to) smoothe, stroke, rub, caress'; (3) PA *-ahw-'alternate motion, as in walking, filing, paddling, polishing'; (4) PA *-āwaki 'they - them' (third person plural ending denoting animate object and animate subject). In the Maryland name, PA *-lāl- appears as -rar-, and -rarahw- contracts to -raw-. The -āwaki appears as -aok, with the w so weakly sounded that the English did not hear it.

LINGANORE ['linga ,noor]

(1) A creek that enters the Monocacy River below Hughes Ford, Frederick County; (2) a village on that creek (USGS, Frederick, 1909, Mt. Airy, 1909); and (3) several caves (Linganore Shelter Caves).

Linganoa Creek (MHM, XV, 394-95, for 1724); Linganore (Md. 1794 Griffith); Linganore C. (Md. 1834 Tanner); Linganore Cr., P. O. (Md. 1866 Martenet).

Previous Opinions

T. J. C. Williams states' that Linganore means 'left ear,' from the name of an Indian chief who lived on its banks. Apparently it was fancied that the name contains German linke(n) and ohr 'left ear.' This is evidently folklore.

Conclusion

Linganore may be related to Delaware linkteu 'it melts' (B & A, 64).² The Cree cognate is tikk (Lacombe, 617); in Ojibwa and Algonkin it is ning. These forms point to a PA *\textit{\textit{e}}enk. The full early form of Linganore could then have been Link-anwi-wi 'It melts (copiously) in springtime.' The component stems mean (1) link- (PA *\textit{\textit{e}}enk) 'melt'; (2) -anwi-, inanimate copula referring to natural phenomena (here 'springtime'); (3) -wi, third singular inanimate ending. To produce modern Linganore, the final -wi, like most Algonquian verb endings, would disappear; the remaining -wi- (of -anwi-) would become -oa.
