Up in the Malibu Canyons in a small valley is Semler Ranch. It is one of the most unique ranches I have ever been to, due to that fact that it has its own micro climate. In this micro climate the Semler family cultivates varietals that produce some extravagant wines. Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Syrah are some of the wines that I tasted during my visit to the ranch. These wines were fruit forward with smooth tannins, the bouquet of these wines are incredibly awesome. During my visit I can see the love that the Semler family put into producing these excellent wines. The Semler's have plans to cultivate other varietals as well. I can not see this region not having its own A.V.A in the near future. One does not have to be their to see it, just order one bottle of wine from their micro climate region and one can taste it.
